MAGNUS DITLEV IS THE
UP-AND-COMING KING OF TRIATHLON.

He has established his versatility and dominance in the middle distance; and his youth and methodological improvement make him capable of breaking every record in the books.

Arguably the strongest cyclist in the sport, Magnus pushes his limits to see what his body is capable of.

Magnus utilizes his scientific background, and training as a chemical engineer, to structure his training. This has resulted in methodological improvement.

He scientifically tests every piece of equipment and is meticulous about practice and race-day decisions, making him the biggest threat to Ironman.

He says, "It's not just about how hard you can push the pedals. There's so much more to it. You won't find a guy that knows more about aerodynamics on the bike."

“...ONE OF THE HOTTEST PROPERTY IN IRONMAN CIRCLES. THE DANISH TRIATHLETE IS RIPPING UP THE HISTORY BOOKS, ESPECIALLY WHEN IT COMES TO THE BIKE.”

-TRIATHLON 220

Notable achievements include a 3rd place at the PTO World Rankings 2022, a win at the legendary full distance race Challenge Roth, a 3rd place at the IRONMAN 70.3 World Championships along with multiple IM and IM 70.3 victories.

He is affectionately known as a gentle giant off the field to play—and when he puts on a race number, his performances are heroic.

When Magnus turned pro, he was involved in a crash that left him with a broken left collarbone. He was sidelined for more than a year; but during his recovery, he was able to ride his bike and this, he says, is when he became a strong cyclist.

He says, “I’m quite competitive. When I was in the hospital after the first serious crash, they told me I wasn’t going to be able to swim anymore. I remember when they said that, the first thing I did was go to a room with a stationary bike and I went back down to the bike and sat on it and I wanted to prove to myself that no one should tell me what I can do in the future. It lies quite deep within me.”

Triathlon 220 says, “the brutal speed that Ditlev can achieve on his bike has to mark him out as a future world champion – whether at 70.3 or full Ironman. Or, of course, both.”
